Throughout the year, they will develop skills in financial responsibility, managerial practices, teamwork, and the ability to learn from failure on their path to excellence.

Portfolio Evaluations

JRHS uses a form of semester evaluation called a Portfolio. As a high-order evaluation tool, the Portfolio focuses on content and application principles. The Portfolio serves to measure growth in a meaningful, relevant way and enable students to examine and evaluate their work and performance. The ongoing assessment inspires students to reach for new heights and facilitates scholarship, college, and job applications.

Project-Based Learning

Project Based Learning provides unique experiences that teach useful hard and soft skills. These courses change from year to year, offering new and different skills for our students. Students take five project classes each year, one each quarter plus a four-week January term. Many of these courses vary over time.

Humanities Faire

This is our first quarter project each year and involves the entire student body. Together, students create every aspect of a performance depicting the major players and places from one of these time periods: The Ancient World, Medieval Europe, Colonial America, Victorian Era, the Renaissance & Reformation, and the 20th Century United States.

Spiritual Formation

God is at the center of all our pursuits. Between our exceptional Bible classes, the devotion we do at the beginning of each day, and Friday morning Chapel each week, our students walk with God each and every day. In addition, we have a weekly small group Bible study called Koinonia (a Greek word meaning “gathering” and pronounced KOY nuh Nee yuh) that meets Wednesday mornings. Our Fall Annual Retreat incorporates a meaningful message significant to our teens that we’ve seen bear much fruit. Perhaps our most impactful program is our Annual Mission Trip. We offer varying location options that often include a local trip, another within the US, and an international trip. These trips include evangelism and work experiences, helping others, and sharing the Gospel.

Vibrant Christian Community

Students, parents, faculty, staff, alumni, and a vast array of supporters, pastors, youth group leaders, and many more make up our community who work together to make JRHS great place to grow.

Basketball (winter) - separate boys & girls teams
